In my app I have an NSDateComponents object that was created using [NSDateComponents dateComponentWithYears:] If I try to create a date that is 1 year in the past, it works as expected. However, if I create it a year into the future, the components will be different, but the date will be wrong. This results in something like: 11/21/1753 0:00:00 +0000 Note that I'm 100% sure this isn't an OS error, as the same code works as expected on Android and iOS. NSDate *date = [[NSCalendar currentCalendar] dateFromComponents:myComponents]; A: NSDateComponents take a year and a month and add them together to make a date. If you want the year to be a multiple of 4, you just need to move the year 1 year back. NSDate *date = [[NSCalendar currentCalendar] dateFromComponents:myComponents]; NSInteger year = [date year]; if (year % 4!= 0) { // moved forward 1 year, so 1875 now. year -= 1; } Alternatively, you could use nscalarByAddingYears: instead of dateFromComponents:, which
