PC Hack - NO STEALING, NO INFECTIOUS CODE,. . .A look at the development and current state of tubulogenesis in the mouse kidney. Tubulogenesis, the generation of kidney tubules from ureteric bud and surrounding metanephric mesenchyme, is required for the proper development of nephrons. Disruption of tubulogenesis in humans causes renal agenesis or hypoplasia, and many animal models of renal agenesis/hypoplasia also show a defect in tubulogenesis. We demonstrate that tubulogenesis in the mouse occurs between E12.5 and E14.5 in a mosaic pattern, that there is a strong correlation between the presence of ureteric bud and metanephric mesenchyme and tubulogenesis, and that tubulogenesis requires a network of intermediate mesoderm cells, specifically the undifferentiated posterior mesenchyme. Because the mouse kidney is one of the few organs that can be removed intact from the embryo, the mouse has the advantage of being able to be genetically modified and analyzed in the context of normal development. We have used these advantages to genetically modify the Notch signaling pathway within the ureteric bud and surrounding metanephric mesenchyme and found that it is required for proper kidney development. These results demonstrate the usefulness of the mouse as a model for studying the development of tubulogenesis and the genetic basis of renal agenesis/hypoplasia.COMPATIBILITY: For use with sister non-surgical lip
